Stay up to date with emerging trends and regulations in human resources. HR roles are rapidly changing from basic recruitment and legal compliance to new accountability for strategic leadership, talent retention, and performance management.

A Career in Human Resource Management

Whether you’re a seasoned professional or are just entering the field, a certificate in Human Resource Management from UNLV will expand your understanding of current issues and trends in HR. Human Resource Management training is also useful for first-time managers, small business owners, and numerous other career paths requiring knowledge of best practices for hiring, training, and managing staff.

In order to stay competitive, today’s companies must stay up to date on employment laws and staffing trends. In a small business, one employee may be responsible for all aspects of human resources including:
- Compensation & Benefits
- Training & Development
- Recruitment & Staffing
- HR Information System Analysis or Payroll
- Employee Support

In large companies, human resource professionals may serve as specialists in a single function.

UNLV’s Human Resource Management Certificate can train you for this critical business role. Course offerings provide a broad understanding of HR disciplines including benefits, compensation, organizational and employee development, diversity, employee relations, employment law, and staff management. Courses also may be taken individually to expand your skill set.

Nevada Employment Outlook:
In Las Vegas, employment in human resource management is projected to grow 20-30 percent over the next ten years, depending on specialty.
